A Presenter's Perspective

As the presenter for The Tower Theatre, I attended the Arts Northwest Booking Conference.

On hearing the group now known as Romanza, and helped by the biggest accolades at the presenters showcase, I immediately booked these fine young singers for an appearance at The Tower.

I worked directly with the singers many times and found their approach to dealing with me most cordial and articulate, making the task of bringing them to their first public appearance in the USA most pleasurable.

We discussed the song selection in depth and created a program that ran the gamut from high humor to deep emotion.

And we were not disappointed. The ability of their excellent voices and harmony to reach the mind and soul of our audience was remarkable. When they performed solo or as duets, this added a further dimension to their range.

After three standing ovations, I knew a return appearance was called for, and even more so, as these good looking young men mixed with complete ease with our patrons off stage and in the lobby.

We'd certainly like to bring them back for outreach programs and to perform with one of our local symphony companies.

I do not believe a venue will go wrong in presenting Romanza.
